A treasure of timeless classicsVon kwadzanaWhat a wonderful treasure; an ebook collection of some of the most mind-twisting mysteries of all time. There are five classics in this collection that should take a while to read. However, once each mystery takes hold of you, you won't be able to stop turning pages until the answer to the mysterious puzzle is revealed.The Big Bow Mystery by Israel Zangwill. First published in 1892.The Four Just Men by Edgar Wallace. First published in 1905.The Invisible Man and The Wrong Shape by G. K. Chesterton. First published in The Innocence of Father Brown in 1911.The Valley of Fear by Arthur Conan Doyle. First published in 1914.The Doomdorf Mystery by Melville Davisson Post. First published in 1918.An added bonus included is an image gallery which includes some very old photographs of the authors.I've just finished the last book in the collection, The Doomdorf Mystery. All I can say is, Wow! In fact I am not planning on reading anything now for a few days. I just want to daydream about Abner and Randolph poking around in the West Virginia woods of the early 20th century, scratching their heads as they try and figure out how the murderer entered and exited the locked room.In today's literary world, we are bombarded with mass-marketed, mediocre fad books, mass-produced to make money. But this extraordinary collection is the real deal. All five of these stories are simultaneously timeless and old school and yet they were/are in many ways, fifty years ahead of their time. You will have to read them to see what I mean. These timeless classics can be read, re-read and you will always remember them. Enjoy.0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. A wonderful collection of my favorite detective storiesVon ZSWhat a wonderful collection of my favorite detective stories. Aside from my all-times-favorite Arthur Conan Doyle, this collection offers novels such as "The Four Just Men" by Wallace or "Doomdorf Mystery" by Post, not to mention Chesterton mysteries, the reads I was craving to have on my Kindle for years. Thank you for putting this collection together!

KurzbeschreibungThe original whodunits were the locked room mysteries, a sub-genre of the detective mystery in which a crime is committedalmost always murder in a location that no intruder could have entered or left, e.g., a locked room. There have been many ingenious twists on the motif since it first flourished in the late 1890s and early 1900s, as can be seen in the classic collection that makes up British Mystery Multipacks Volume 8 Locked Room Mysteries: The Big Bow Mystery by Israel ZangwillRegarded as the first full-length locked room mystery, the novel focuses on a murder that has occurred inside a locked room, with no clear indication as to the weapon used, the perpetrator of the horrendous crime, or a possible escape route. The Four Just Men by Edgar WallaceThe dead body of a politician is discovered in a room, locked from within and protected from without. The room is empty of all but the murdered man and even upon finding the corpse, it cannot be determined what the man died of. The Invisible Man and The Wrong Shape by G. K. Chesterton From Chesterton's first Father Brown collection, The Innocence of Father Brown, comes two whodunits best described as locked-room detective cozy mysteries!The Valley of Fear by Arthur Conan DoyleThe fourth and final Sherlock Holmes mystery is one of Doyle's finest. A man is shot with a sawed-off shotgun and disfigured beyond recognition in an impregnable castle, to which the only entrance is sealed. There is a trail of bewildering cluesraincoats, dumbbells, a missing wedding ringand a gripping backstory of a cult that terrorized a valley in the American West. The Doomdorf Mystery by Melville Davisson PostGuest American author Melville Post's best-known character is the mystery-solving, justice dispensing West Virginian backwoodsman, Uncle Abner. The 22 Uncle Abner tales, written between 1911 and 1928, have been called some of "the finest mysteries ever written." The Doomdorf Mystery is one of the best.Includes author image gallery.KurzbeschreibungThe original whodunits were the locked room mysteries, a sub-genre of the detective mystery in which a crime is committedalmost always murder in a location that no intruder could have entered or left, e.g., a locked room. It has been almost continuously in print since 1891 and has been used as the basis for three commercial films. His play The Lens Grinder, based on the life of Spinoza, was widely produced. Richard Horatio Edgar Wallace (1875-1932) was an English writer. Born into poverty, Wallace left school at 12. Joining the army at 21, he was a war correspondent during the Second Boer War for Reuters and The Daily Mail. Struggling with debt, he left South Africa, returned to London and began writing thrillers to raise income, publishing books such as The Four Just Men (1905). Drawing on time as a reporter in the Congo, covering the Belgian atrocities, Wallace serialized short stories in magazines, later publishing collections such as Sanders of the River (1911). Gilbert Keith Chesterton (1874-1936) better known as G. K. Chesterton, was an English writer, lay theologian, poet, philosopher, dramatist, journalist, orator, literary and art critic, biographer, and Christian apologist. Chesterton is often referred to as the "prince of paradox." Time magazine, in a review of a biography of Chesterton, observed of his writing style: "Whenever possible Chesterton made his points with popular sayings, proverbs, allegories first carefully turning them inside out." Time, said of him, "He was a man of colossal genius." Sir Arthur Ignatius Conan Doyle (1859-1930) was a British physician and writer who is most noted for his fictional stories about the detective Sherlock Holmes, which are generally considered milestones in the field of crime fiction. He is also known for writing the fictional adventures of a second character he invented, Professor Challenger, and for popularizing the mystery of the Mary Celeste. He was a prolific writer whose other works include fantasy and science fiction stories, plays, romances, poetry, non-fiction and historical novels. Melville Davisson Post (1869 1930) was an American author, born in Harrison County, West Virginia. His family settled in the Clarksburg, West Virginia area in the late 18th century. In addition to Uncle Abner, Post also created two other recurring characters, Sir Henry Marquis and Randolph Mason.
