Gruselkrimis - und man muss sagen: Alle Achtung, das ist ihr schon im Groen und Ganzen gelungen. Man lebt und leidet mit der Heldin mit: Hat sie Wahnvorstellungen, hat sie Tagtrume oder was steckt dahinter? Und warum um Gottes Willen, hat sie diesen unmöglichen Mann geheiratet? Leider zieht sich die Geschichte dann doch etwas - und das Ende kann auch nicht ganz berzeugen, deswegen nur 3 Sterne. Doch alles in allem eine Novelle, die sich lohnt zu lesen - Susan Hill verfügt über eine hervorragende Ausdruckskraft und Sprache, schon alleine deswegen ist dieser kleine Roman lesenswert. Fazit: Empfehlenswert, trotz mancher Logikfehler und Längen.

Kurzbeschreibung When Adrian and Paula move to a cottage in the countryside, they don't know what to expect. At first, Adrian finds their new life idyllic, and insists on lots of long walks and fresh air, while Paula finds rural life lonely and dull. Then some small and oddly silent children start showing up -- in the woods, the garden, and eventually inside the house itself. Their presence proves disturbing to Adrian, who is having second thoughts about the move they've made. It's Paula now who seems more at home with country life, and Paula who starts to take a peculiar comfort from the mysterious new arrivals. Hunger is a haunting account of a marriage unsettled by a move -- from a master of psychological suspense. Susan Hill has been a professional writer for over 50 years. Her books have won the Whitbread, and John Llewellyn Prizes, and the W. Somerset Maugham Award and been shortlisted for the Booker Prize. Her novels include Strange Meeting, I'm the King of the Castle and A Kind Man, and she has also published autobiography and collections of short stories. Her ghost story, The Woman in Black, has been running in London's West End since 1988. Susan Hill is married with two adult daughters and lives in North
