As she grew more mature, so did her writing. In high school, she began writing teenaged love stories featuring the teen heartthrobs of that era. By the time she was 25, she was writing short stories and sharing them online as a hobby. After completing her training with the Paul Mitchell Systems and becoming a hair care professional, Olivia accepted the fact that, though she enjoys doing hair, her true passion is and always has been writing. She has been featured in two erotic anthologies and has published an e-book featuring three of her short stories. She Say, She Say: A Modern Love Story, her first novel, debuted in 2012. She is currently working on several projects to be released in the future. She believes fiction can be romantic and steamy, yet true-to-life. This easygoing mother of two considers herself a travel agent for mental getaways, and she invites all who have an open mind to enjoy a vacation through her writing.
