Von Stephen Coonts : The Intruders (Jake Grafton) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Intruders (Jake Grafton):

Carrier AirOps are described in detail. I am a pilot, so I loved those parts of the book. That's why I gave it 3 starsAs a Story, I found this book lacking. I get the feeling that Mr. Coonts wrote some high detailed, fast paced, adrenilin pumping flying scenes and then said, "I need a story to put them in."The climax of the story came out of left field and left me Asking, "How did we get here?"Read it for the NavAir Blue Water Ops. Just don't expect much of a story. If it was a video, I'd buy a copy, but I'd be doing a lot of fast forwarding1 von 1 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. One of my Coonts Favorites .... HIGHLY RECOMMENDEDVon 500grandThe storyline itself certainly is the weak point in this novel of the Jake Grafton series. However, this is more than compensated for by the day-to-day naval aviation aspects described in such a fascinating way that Coonts keeps you glued to each single word. It lacks most of the Science Fiction aspects present in the later Grafton stories but this makes it even more interesting. Jake being a mere Lt. helps to keep the story more realistic. The usual slow story development in the first half of Coonts' books is not evident here. Overall: One of my Coonts Favorites .... HIGHLY RECOMMENDED.0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. A different look after a warVon Ein KundeI read 'Flight of the Intruder' some ten years ago, and it was with some anticipation that I picked up 'The Intruders.' There are few books that deal with the period immediately after Vietnam, and although this is fiction, this depicts in brutal clarity the way Vietnam had changed America, both inside and outside of its military. 'The Intruders' is a thinker's book, in spite of its action. I recommend it highly - there are few that equal its insight and focus for what it covers

Kurzbeschreibung1973. The skies over Vietnam have finally gone silent. America has pulled out and the war is over. But for Lt. Jake Grafton, USN, fresh from two combat cruises and a harrowing shoot-down over Laos, the personal battle is just beginning. His country has not welcomed him home with open arms, but with closed minds and closed fists. When his girlfriend's father called him a murderer, Jake walked away. But when a stranger in a bar challenged his honour, the man was not so lucky - the guy landed in the hospital. Jake landed in jail. And now Grafton's commander, who bailed him out, has devised the perfect punishment: an eight-month mission teaching jarheads - Marines - the nuances of carrier aviation. The Marines may be made of tempered steel and brass balls, but taking off and landing from a slippery flight deck, on a choppy sea, in pitch-black, there is no margin for error - or for animosity. And men like Marine Captain Flap Le Beau, Grafton's bombardier/navigator, have a real gift for pushing Jake's buttons. But he's going to have to learn to live with him, as now they must fly together in the same cockpit, and make the split-second decisions which will insure that, tonight, their fellow pilots don't raise a glass to them
