Kurzbeschreibung Did Lauren Rutherford, believe in luck? Absolutely. After all, he lived in her house and his first name was Bad. Did Lauren Rutherford believe in magic? Absolutely not. But sometimes life just loves to prove you wrong. Lauren Rutherford knows is a woman of many failings. She can't cook, she can't hold down a serious relationship and she can't manage her money worth a damn. What she doesn't know is that she's the last descendant of a long line of witches. She needs to learn her craft, and fast, because the only thing between her and certain death is Agnes, her long-dead ancestor who has a foul mouth and a passion for G-strings, and Daniel, a sexy as hell male witch who drives her to distraction. Lauren is the victim of a four hundred year old curse. Her life depends on her surviving a challenge set down by three damned souls, a challenge that will take her to hell and back. Literally. And Satan doesn't do tea and scones!

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Sharon Karaa is a mass of contradictions but two facets of her character have always battled for supremacy; her logical self (let's call him Frank) and her artistic side (lets her call Misty). Until recently, Frank won every battle, forcing Sharon into a life based on most probable outcome and, to give him his credit, it has led to a fairly comfortable if rather boring life so far. Then Misty took up kick boxing and gave Frank a good kick in the goodies. Sharon lives with her husband in a little village north of Newcastle upon Tyne, England. She doesn't have a cat.
